3,000 Bombers Turned Out At Willow Run

DETROIT, Mar. 25 (AP).—The Ford operated Willow Run bomber plant has turned out more than 3,000 of the big four-engined Liberator bomber planes, the company disclosed today.

Of the total output more than 2,000 were flown away from the big plant near Ypsilanti. The remainder were shipped, knock-down, for assembly at other aircraft assembly plants.

The exact rate of monthly production at Willow Run was not disclosed, but a company spokesman said today that the plant has been ahead of its schedule for the last eight months and continues ahead of contract levels.
